Report:

The Parents–Teacher Meeting (PTM) was organized by the School of Science at Sandip University on 18 April 2026 with the primary objective of strengthening the connection between parents and faculty members to review student’s academic progress, attendance, conduct, and overall development.

The session commenced with a formal welcome address by the faculty coordinators, who emphasized the vital role of parental involvement in shaping students’ academic journeys and personal growth. The faculty presented a comprehensive overview of the academic curriculum, internal assessment framework, attendance norms, and the various initiatives undertaken by the School of Science to enhance learning outcomes and student engagement.

An interactive segment formed the core of the meeting, where parents engaged in detailed one-on-one discussions with mentors and subject teachers. During these interactions, individual student performance, classroom participation, discipline, and involvement in co-curricular activities were carefully reviewed and discussed. This approach enabled parents to gain clear insights into their wards’ progress and areas requiring additional attention.

To ensure inclusivity and convenience, an online interaction facility was also arranged for parents who were unable to attend the meeting in person. Through the virtual mode, they actively participated in discussions, shared feedback, and received updates regarding their ward’s academic standing, thereby maintaining effective communication despite physical constraints.

The suggestions and feedback received from both in-person and online participants were acknowledged with appreciation, reflecting the collaborative spirit between parents and the institution. Faculty members addressed various queries raised by parents and assured them of continuous academic support, regular monitoring, and personalized guidance to ensure the holistic development of students.
